

OFFICE OF OPERATIONS
GLOBAL WAR PLAN

GENERAL

1. Under the assumptions in draft DD/I War Plan, there is no statement as to whether both the continental United States and overseas installations will be attacked simultaneously. However, as this purports to be a global war plan, we may assume that the continental United States will, in fact, be attacked as well as all or part of our overseas installations with little or no warning. It is, therefore, almost impossible, especially in the case of 25X1A8a [REDACTED] to draw up detailed plans with Logistics and Communications annexes to cover every contingency for the overseas [REDACTED]. The type and area or 25X1A areas of attack would dictate the individual plan for each [REDACTED]. The 25X1A various combinations of events could be such that they might necessitate 25X1A anywhere from one to five different plans for each [REDACTED]. Therefore, 25X1A plans for these overseas [REDACTED] must be stated in general terms. To a lesser extent this applies to [REDACTED] 25X1A8a

ASSUMPTIONS

2. That in a global war continental United States will, in fact, become a theater of war. For the purpose of our planning, however, we will further assume that there will be a centralized theater command in the Washington area and that domestic field installations of both the [REDACTED] 25X1A8a [REDACTED] will not come under the local operational control of regional Army commanders. 25X1A8a

3. That the Office of Operations will:

- a. Continue to provide "services of common concern" in the collection of intelligence information from overt sources.
- b. Continue to provide operational support for other CIA intelligence activities, especially clandestine operations.
- c. Provide increased support to the military services.
- d. Undertake overt collection and related support operations as required by any US/Allied agreements.

MISSION

4. Although the primary mission of the Office of Operations in the event of a global war will be, as in peace-time, the collection of intelligence information as a service of common concern to the IAC agencies, its facilities, personnel and overt sources may of necessity be oriented more directly toward support of the US military effort. The assignment by the NSC of certain services to be performed "centrally" has permitted the Office of Operations to develop unique facilities and experience in three major fields of intelligence collection and support, with the implication that the military services need not duplicate these activities but would count on their availability in the event of war.

Office of Operations, Global War Plan

5. The present facilities of the Office of Operations can be immediately put on a wartime basis to fulfill its role in the collection of foreign intelligence information and the provision of support. However, it is expected that many new requirements will be levied upon this Office and, therefore, its facilities will have to be augmented, both in respect to personnel and equipment, to fully meet the wartime load (see divisional and Sovmat plans).

6. By agreement between the Department of State, the Atomic Energy Commission and CIA, dated 10 July 1951, the Central Intelligence Agency will represent the Department of State and the Atomic Energy Commission in the exploitation for foreign intelligence purposes of documents, personnel, and material acquired in theaters of operations by the military forces (see Tab A). These responsibilities were assigned to the Office of Operations by the DCI and assumed by the Foreign Documents Division, [REDACTED] and the Sovmat Staff.

ORGANIZATION OF THE OFFICE OF THE AD/O TO CONDUCT WARTIME OPERATIONS

7. If Headquarters CIA is not disrupted by the initial attack and remains in Washington:

a. The present semi-autonomous operations of the three divisions will continue with certain modifications.

b. The chiefs of the three divisions while continuing to supervise the activities of their divisions will act in close coordination as senior staff members of the AD/O.

c. The Planning and Coordinating Staff will be increased to five professionals and three clericals.

(1) Two members of the P&C Staff will handle administrative matters, as it is contemplated that under wartime conditions there will be a somewhat closer centralization of administration and it will be necessary to determine in the Office of the AD/O priorities for funds, equipment, communications, etc.

(2) Three members of the P&C Staff will be concerned with the conduct of present operations and new activities.

8. If Headquarters CIA relocates to [REDACTED] the Assistant Director for Operations, the Deputy Assistant Director for Operations, and the Chiefs of the three Divisions and Sovmat Staff will go to the relocation area accompanied by a minimum of one other person from each division and one secretary. Staff build-up mentioned in paragraph 7c, above, will be accomplished when space permits. The Deputy Chiefs of [REDACTED] 25X1A6d
[REDACTED] will go to the East Coast [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] 25X1A8a
[REDACTED] respectively, with a sufficient complement of personnel to establish divisional headquarters. 25X1A6a

9. If relocation is accomplished due to an alert (and not immediate attack), the DAD/O will remain in Washington until the last possible moment to supervise the operations of departmental personnel who remain at work in the Washington Headquarters.
